ASK Partners names new chief technology officer

Specialist real estate lender ASK Partners has appointed Mark Templeman (pictured above) as chief technology officer.

Mark previously worked as an independent consultant to the company.

During this time, he led the implementation of ASK's client portal.

Prior to this, he held senior positions delivering operational risk and technology platforms at Deutsche Bank and RBS.

In his full-time role at ASK, Mark will continue to develop and enhance existing technology platforms to improve efficiency and investor experience.

Daniel Austin, CEO and co-founder of ASK, commented: "Mark's role is key to delivering the vision we have for ASK."

"As our client and investor base continues to grow rapidly, with seven transactions totalling £100m since lockdown, now is absolutely the right time for us to streamline our processes and enhance the investor experience."

ASK offers bespoke funding solutions to experienced property developers and investors priding itself on a relationship-led approach, rather than being metric driven.
